03 - 07 - tragedy in alaska details 01

tragedy in Alaska is the true story of a young man and woman who was exploring the Alaskan Wilderness in a jeep on a sunny morning in the summer part of the year.

while traveling on the road, one of the passengers sees something they would like to explore further and park their car in a dry but moist river bed.

when the passenger on the passenger side of the car gets out of the car, she steps into a substance where she is unable to move her feet.

the male driver of the vehicle comes to her aid trying to free her from the vice like muddy substance.

after unsuccessfully trying to remove her from the substance for several minutes he decides to leave her alone in the riverbed and goes after paramedics or park rangers for help.

after waiting I do not know how long, professional help finally arrives.

when the professional rescuer do arrive, they are equally as baffled as the male driver, being unable to free her from the vice like muddy substance.

after failing at many efforts to free the trapped lady, things begin to get worse.

*the river bed that was dry in the morning,
is beginning to fill with water.*

now the paramedic mission is not only to free the lady from the mud, but also to stop her from getting hypothermia from the cold water.

as day the end and the night begin the river water level of continually rises.

*the paramedic are able to give a her wet suit to keep part of body warm, but eventually the water rises to depth above
her head,*

as water rises above the trapped victim head, the paramedic give her a hose so she suck fresh air from above the water.

while the intentions of the paramedic were honorable, the frigidness of the water or just stress and fatigue of being trapped so long took its toll on the lady and she drown that night in the riverbed.

her friend and the paramedic had to leave her dead in the river that entire night until the river dried up again.

while it is true that sadness had to fill the lady heart as she approached death, I can not begin to imagine what her friends and paramedic were thinking and feeling.

as a military veteran who was force to do many military training exercises in freezing weather, I sadly admit when my toes and finger were almost frost bitten, I asked Almighty God to take my life so my pain and suffering would end.

I wonder at what point did the lady in the river bed give up hope and graciously accepted death.

the loss of her life was sad, but I think her friend and the paramedic will be tortured the rest of lives with this event,

*the story I just tried to tell was from a story I watched on the Travel Channel in San Francisco
on a Saturday.*

after writing this story my spirit and mind is full of more questions than I had when I seen it.

I am writing about this story in my journal of Super Natural Forces because I know they exist and is partially confused why they did not help her.

03 - 14 - the curse of the tragedy !

the curse of this tragedy is obvious, the young lady die.

but what makes this tragedy more gruesome is how long it took for her to die people who find death quick in collision accident do not have much time think about the fate; but this lady spent over 14 hours trapped.

*when did she lose hope in her friends.
when did she lose hope in the paramedics.
when did she lose hope in Almighty God.*

at the end of the video the rescuer showed a device that could free people from the sticky mud like material.

while of no comfort to the lady, people in the future may be able to find help.

while the above statements are nice, my blessing from watching the video was to be ever more prayerful to Almighty God.

to beg his angels to keep my family and me SAFE from all dangers;

03 - 16 - my lesson from the tragedy !

one of my lessons from this tragedy is to always think before you act.

while I acknowledge the existence of spiritual forces that can protect us from danger, I also acknowledge that we as people should always be aware of our surrounding, watching where we place our feet and the people and things around us.

should the driver had known about the river bed ?

should the lady had tested the mud with a stick, we will never know,

03 - 17 - author objective in Story 1 !

this story is listed in a journal about Super Natural Forces because it tells one of many stories where something in the Spiritual World did take any actions to save a life.

my primary objective in writing the story is to try to understand why.

was it because she was an atheist who did not believe in God ?

was it because she was being punished for past event ?

in my opinion the punishment was to great.

*tragedy on an Alaskan Riverbed is listed in my journal of Super Natural Forces
because it is my hope to encourage people to never take the messages from the spiritual worlds for granted.*

some tragedies can be avoided by using our natural senses.

my secondary objective is a plea for more people to trust their intuition and meditate.

*this story is so special to me because it is one of the saddest stories
I ever witnessed in my life.*

while the publishers and actors did a great job in presenting the story, what happened in the story torments my mind and soul in ways words cannot describe.

*part of my soul wish I never seen the

*as stated in a previous article my heart is confused on why
Almighty God
let things like this happen to people.*

completely believing in my heart that some people suffer tragedies so other people can perfect their Power of Faith.

*completely believing the Power of Faith
can only be gained thru suffering,
I still wish there was another way,*
